

Announcement Letter October 2010

Dear Brethren:

A heartfelt greeting to all of you in this first issue since returning home from the Feast of Tabernacles. We pray that you had a very inspiring experience at the Feast, and that you are deriving much consolation from knowing you have fulfilled one of those key test commands of God. It often takes great effort and sacrifice to put God first, but how often do we find that doing so brings us much satisfaction in the end, and the very best memories of our lives. Those of you who were impeded from being together in one of those designated places are still very much loved, and we will be praying for your help and consolation, and that you might have the blessing of attending with God's people in the coming year, God willing.

For reason, God has not allowed any of us to see what the future holds, specifically. We are all required to walk in faith, putting our trust in Him, day by day. Will we have another year of relative peace as we have enjoyed in the past? Will this coming year be much like the current one? It is easy to assume that all things will continue as they have. Perhaps they will. But then again, perhaps not. We know without doubt that one day things in this world will truly change, and change dramatically. We make no prognostications about that timing. But we should all be watching carefully, rousing ourselves from spiritual slumber, and thinking in terms of holding fast to God's Truth in times of great peril.

This is now the time of year when we in the church office sit down and begin making plans for the next calendar-year's activities. All of the services we provide to you must be planned and coordinated. It is a major endeavor to structure that plan to be sure to cover every responsibility and obligation. It is much like a gigantic jigsaw puzzle. Not only does it include the ministerial travel schedule, but also the writing and speaking schedules for every week during the year, as well as music and physical meeting arrangements. Much work behind the scenes goes into targeting and fulfilling every deadline, and each church staff member must have a blueprint to work from to assure we are coordinated and efficient. Given that unexpected events can and do transpire which mandate adjustments as we go along, it is still imperative for good order that we begin with a common blueprint to guide us. That yearly plan becomes the basis for keeping all of us on the same page and working in unity to serve all of you.

We want you to be well pleased with the results of our labors. That is what we are committed to provide in the coming year, as a testament to our respect for God, as well as our heartfelt love for each one of you. Our annual schedule will be constructed, as always, with the assumption that all things will continue in peace to allow us to work unfettered in serving you. All such plans in past years have certainly been blessed in that way. But again, we will ever remain cognizant that the best we can hope to do is to make a target for the future year, assuming our current levels of blessing will continue. If they do, we intend to continue to provide every bit as much as we have in the past, while continuing to look for even better ways to expand those services. You are all worth it, and you deserve it. I know we can count upon you to add your prayers to ours, that God will guide, protect, and inspire all along the way.
